
Yakushi (the Medicine Buddha) is the Bodhisattva doctor. He holds a medicine jar in his hand and is attended by twelve gods each of whom represents one of his twelve vows. The main object of his appearance among us is to cure us of ignorance, which is the most fundamental of all the ills the flesh is heir to.

Acknowledgements

We would like to acknowledge the guidance of the following spiritual benefactors, without whose input this book could not have been completed.

Heading the list, in alphabetical order, are Master Thich Huyen Dung, Master Thich Phuoc Bon and Rev. K. Watanabe, three kalyanamitra with an intimate understanding of the Sutra of the Medicine Buddha. Rev. Tzu Han (Antony) kindly read through and commented on the text. Other benefactors have also provided crucial assistance: Upasaka Hien Mat, a scholar-practitioner of the Twelve Great Vows of the Medicine Buddha, and incidentally, a compatriot of the senior editor from the warm-hearted land of snow he has adopted as his own; Upasika Quynh Hoa, always there when needed – an accomplished diplomat; Upasaka Harry Leong, a great spiritual son of the Esoteric tradition; Upasika Nancy Luong, the most cheerful data specialist we have known; and, most importantly, Upasaka Vu Xuan Hoai, our learned Dharma consultant from Connecticut, and Upasaka Dick M. Saunders, both of whom pitched in with incisive comments. For this second printing, we acknowledge our debt to Upasaka Duong Dinh Hy -- a scholar of Zen and of ancient Chinese -- who reviewed key passages in record time.

The associate editor would like to honor the memory of two outstanding teachers from Columbia University – Prof. Charles Lo and Prof. Wang Chi-chen – whose profound mastery of classical Chinese was matched only by their subtle grasp of the nuances of the English language. Whatever small contribution she was able to make to this translation is due in large part to their skillful tutelage.

Finally, we acknowledge our debt to the late Upasika Nguyen Thi Hoang /Dieu Phung, our first Dharma teacher, and the ebullient executor of her estate, Upasika Lien Smith, along with her husband, Prof. Forrest G. Smith, for support in the completion of this book.
Note to the English Edition

The present work is part of a multilingual series of Pure Land and Pure Land-related texts prepared since 1991 by the Van Hien Study Group, in cooperation with the Sutra Translation Committee of the United States and Canada and the International Buddhist Monastic Institute (USA).

This new translation is of a Pure Land-related text, the Sutra of the Medicine Buddha. It has benefitted from six previous renderings in both Sino-Vietnamese and English and incorporates oral explanations and comments provided by several contemporary senior Masters. Explanatory notes and a glossary are included for the benefit of readers.

In the Mahayana tradition of East Asia, particularly China, Japan, Vietnam and Tibet, Bhaishajya-guru, the Medicine Buddha, (Yao-shih Fo, Yakushi, Dương Sư Phật, Sangye Menla), occupies a special place in the hearts of the devout. Specializing in curing disease, both physical and mental – of which delusion is the root cause – the Medicine Buddha is also the Buddha of wisdom. His healing acts are but the prelude to Supreme Enlightenment for those seekers who have the good fortune to learn of his vows or merely to hear his name!
toward this ultimate goal, the sutra contains a passage describing the steps taken by the Medicine Buddha to help “monks, nuns, upasakas, upasikas, laymen and laywomen” who seek rebirth in Sukhavati, the Pure Land of Amitabha Buddha in the West.

A key element of the sutra is its emphasis on the assistance of the Buddhas and Bodhisattvas, and its corollary of singleminded, enlightened faith. This is the crux of the sutra, the source of the efficacy of the Buddhas’ and Bodhisattvas’ vows. If you are utterly sincere, if you do not harbor a single doubt, you are fully concentrated – you are in samadhi. Your mind is then in tune with the mind of the Buddhas; a process of spiritual osmosis occurs whereby their merits and virtues become your own. How can your wishes and hopes then not become reality? ¹

May all sentient beings live in peace, ultimately attaining Supreme Enlightenment under the benevolent light of the Medicine Buddha – in this world – and the compassionate light of Amitabha Buddha – *in the worlds beyond!*²

* ii Sutra of the Medicine Buddha
Introduction

In the vast Mahayana pantheon, three Buddhas stand supreme: Sakyamuni, the Buddha of the present age; Amitabha, the Lord of Sukhavati, the Western Pure Land; and the Medicine Buddha, the "Healing Buddha", the "Doctor of Body and Soul". As embodiments of the archetypical "healer" watching over the living and "consoler" watching over those long gone, the Medicine Buddha and Amitabha Buddha represent teachings common to all traditions of Buddhism.³

1. Bhaisajya guru – the Medicine Buddha

In East Asian temples, the Medicine Buddha is usually represented seated as part of a massive trinity with Sakyamuni (in the center) and Amitabha (on Sakyamuni’s right). His right hand is raised, forming the Varada mudra, the hand-and-fingers gesture symbolizing offering, giving, compassion. The left hand usually rests on his lap, holding a jar of medicine (or sometimes a healing fruit or stupa). The medicine jar, painted dark blue (the color of the gemstone lapis lazuli), is the distinguishing feature of this Buddha, although it may be missing from some statues.⁴

The Medicine Buddha should be distinguished from Aksobya Buddha (whose Pure Land is also in the East)⁵ and from the Medicine King Bodhisattva (referred to in the Lotus Sutra).
2. The Sutra of the Medicine Buddha

There are currently five extant Chinese translations from the Sanskrit, done between AD 317 and AD 707, as well as two Tibetan translations. The text that forms the basis of this translation is that of the Patriarch Hsuan-tsang, founder of the Chinese Yogacara (Mind-Only) school and translator of some 75 Buddhist sutras. Completed in AD 650, it is considered the most complete and authoritative version of the sutra.

The sutra is composed essentially of three parts, the first describing the Twelve Great Vows of the Medicine Buddha and the second, his extensive merits as well as the various ways he comes to the aid of those beset by sufferings and calamities. The third part sets forth the vows of the twelve Yaksa Generals to benefit sentient beings.

The sutra is influential throughout East Asia, as it combines the Pure Land teachings on rebirth and the esoteric practices of reciting dharani and lighting lamps with the promise of practical benefits in everyday life. This promise (of protection against disease and other personal misfortunes) is the single most attractive feature of the sutra.

3. Teachings of the sutra

The sutra emphasizes faith in the assistance of the Medicine Buddha, while not neglecting self-power, the cultivation of the devout.

"iv Sutra of the Medicine Buddha
The Buddha then said to Ananda: “If sentient beings [beset by heavy karma] should hear the name of the Medicine Buddha Lapis Lazuli Radiance Tathagata, singlemindedly recite and hold fast to it without harboring a single doubt, then it will be impossible for them to sink into the Evil Realms.

“O, Ananda! These sublime practices of the Buddhas are difficult to believe in, difficult to understand. Yet you are now able to uphold them. You should realize that this is due to the awesome power of the Tathagatas.”

However, the question remains as to how reciting the name and making offerings to the Medicine Buddha can ward off disease and calamity, bringing peace and joy to the sick and suffering. In this context, the teachings on the transference of merit and on Mind-Only come into focus.

a) Mind-Only

All karma, good or bad, is created from the mind. If through visualizing the Medicine Buddha or reciting his name, a person’s mind changes from greed, anger and delusion to selflessness, compassion and wisdom, a change in his negative pattern of thinking is realized and his negative karma changes for the good. “The drifting life is cast aside for one of spiritual dedication” (John Blofeld). With the removal of greed, anger and delusion, most other illnesses, however physical their symptoms, are also eventually cured.
b) Transference of merit

Some of us may ask whether the effect of evil karma can be ... changed by repeating the name of Kuan-Yin (Avalokitesvara). This question is tied up with that of rebirth in Sukhavati (the Pure Land) and it may be answered by saying that the invocation of Kuan-Yin's name forms another cause which will right away offset the previous karma. We know, for example, that if there is a dark, heavy cloud above, the chances are that it will rain. But we also know that if a strong wind should blow, the cloud will be carried away somewhere else and we will not feel the rain. Similarly, the addition of one big factor can alter the whole course of karma ... It is only by accepting the idea of life as one whole that both Theravadins and Mahayanists can advocate the practice of transference of merit to others. With the case of Kuan-Yin then, by calling on Her name we identify ourselves with Her and as a result of this identification, Her merits flow over to us. These merits which are now ours then counterbalance our bad karma and save us from calamity. The Law of Cause and Effect still stands good. All that has happened is that a powerful and immensely good karma has overshadowed the weaker one. (Lecture on Kuan-Yin by Tech Eng Soon - Penang Buddhist Association, c. 1960. Pamphlet.)

c) Efficacy of the Vows

The key to the sutra's efficacy lies in the complete absence of doubt on the part of the practitioner. If he is utterly sincere, he is in a de facto state of samadhi – the very state of the Buddhas and Bodhisattvas. His mind is then the mind of the Buddhas --

"vi Sutra of the Medicine Buddha" their merits and virtues become his own. How then can disease or calamity defeat him?

In the end, the teaching of the Sutra of the Medicine Buddha is one of life and hope, infinite trust and boundless compassion – in other words, a teaching of the heart.

What is told is just what the wonder images in the temples tell. Somebody arrived, infinite years ago, who promised release from misery, salvation. Trust in this promise, hold fast to the name of this Buddha ... If a man once heard His name, a new hope has come into his life – this hope is his treasure, he must not squander it. (W. Liebenthal)

And squander it he must not, because this hope leads to nothing less than eventual Enlightenment and Buddhahood.

Thus have I heard: Once Buddha Sakyamuni, the World-Honored One, was traveling throughout the various lands to teach and convert the people. When he arrived in Vaisali, he rested under the Tree of Music, accompanied by 8,000 great Bhiksus. An immeasurably great Assembly, including 36,000 great Bodhisattvas as well as kings, great ministers, Brahmins, laymen and women, the Eight Types of Divinities and other human and non-human beings, gathered respectfully around the Buddha as He preached the Dharma.

He bowed deeply, and with palms joined, respectfully addressed the Buddha: "World-Honored One, may I please request you to explain the various names and titles, the great, past vows and the superlative virtues of the Buddhas, so that those who are listening to you will be freed of karmic obstructions, while in the future, sentient beings in the Dharma Semblance Age will also derive great benefit and joy."

The Buddha praised the Bodhisattva Manjusri, saying:

"Excellent! Excellent, Manjusri! Out of great compassion, you have urged me to explain the names and titles,\textsuperscript{7} merits and virtues and past vows of the Buddhas, in order to liberate those who are bound by karmic obstructions and bring benefits, peace and joy to all sentient beings in the Dharma Semblance Age. The Buddha then said to the Bodhisattva Manjusri:

"East of this world, past countless Buddha-lands -- more numerous than the grains of sand in ten Ganges Rivers -- there exists a world called Pure Lapis Lazuli. The Buddha of that world is called the Medicine Buddha Lapis Lazuli Radiance Tathagata, Arhat, the Perfectly Enlightened, Perfect in Mind and Deed, Well Gone, Knower of the World, Unsurpassed Being, Tamer of Passions, Teacher of Gods and Men, Buddha-World-Honored One.

Lacking the foundations of faith, they amass riches, which they assiduously hoard. Whenever they come across anyone seeking charity, they become annoyed; if forced to give, they feel as much pain and regret as if they were parting with their own flesh.

"Moreover, there are also countless sentient beings who are miserly and avaricious. They spend time amassing wealth, while not daring to spend it even on themselves, let alone on parents, spouse, children, servants or beggars. Upon their death, these stingy persons will descend onto the paths of hungry ghosts or animality.

"Eventually, they will even be able to donate their head, eyes, limbs, blood, flesh or other parts of their bodies to those who need them, not to mention mere material possessions."¹⁰

If through this power, they should hear his name even briefly, their lives on the Evil Paths will end and they will be born again in the human realm. They will hold correct views, diligently pursue their practice and tame their minds. They will then be able to abandon the home life to become monks or nuns. They will uphold and study the Dharma of the Tathagatas rather than disparaging and violating it. With correct views and extensive study, they will fathom the extremely profound meaning of the teachings, abandon all conceit and cease to disparage the correct Dharma. They will no longer have demons as companions, but will gradually cultivate the practices of Bodhisattvas and swiftly perfect them.

At that time, seeking to put an end to these miseries and fulfil the desires of sentient beings, he entered a samadhi called 'Eliminating All the Suffering and Afflictions of Sentient Beings'.

Thereupon, Buddha Sakyamuni praised the great Yakṣa generals with these words: “Good indeed, good indeed, great Yakṣa generals! Those of you who wish to repay the benevolence and the virtues of the World-Honored Medicine Buddha should always benefit and bring joy to all sentient beings in this way.”

Ananda then asked the Buddha: “World-Honored One, what should we call this teaching, and how should we adhere to it and put it into practice?”

Buddha Sakyamuni replied to Ananda: “This teaching is called the ‘Past Vows, Merits and Virtues of the Medicine Buddha’ or the ‘Dharani of the Vows of the Twelve Yakṣa Generals to Benefit Sentient Beings’

When Buddha Sakyamuni finished speaking, the great Bodhisattvas, as well as the great Sravakas, kings, ministers, brahmins, laypersons, devas, nagas, yaksas, gandharvas, asuras, garudas, kinnaras, mahoragas and other human and non-human beings all rejoiced at the Buddha’s words. They faithfully accepted them and put them into practice.

Notes

1. This is the single most important point of the sutra. If you have utmost faith in the words of the sutra, then all the promises of the Medicine Buddha are true. If, however, you harbor even a trace of doubt, no amount of recitation or lamp-lighting will bring the benefits desired. This crucial point is common to all sutras. This intense state of faith is usually accompanied by “tears streaming down one’s face”, as exemplified in the Avatamsaka Sutra by Sudhana in the presence of his primary spiritual benefactor, the Bodhisattva Manjusri:

Then Sudhana, pleased, enraptured, transported with joy, delighted, happy, and cheerful, laid his head at the feet of Manjushri in respect, circled Manjushri hundreds and thousands of times, and looked at him hundreds and thousands of times ... with tears streaming down his face as he wept, and left Manjushri (Thomas Cleary, tr., Vol. III, p. 55-56).

2. Representation of the Medicine Buddha:

In later Chinese Buddhism (apparently beginning in the Sung period), Bhaisajyaguru (the Medicine Buddha) was depicted in a different sort of assembly. Here the Buddha of Healing is joined by Amitabha and Sakyamuni to form a basic trinity important in Chinese Buddhism to the present day. This group, often depicted in massive sculpture, commonly is found on the principal altar of the main assembly hall of Chinese Buddhist temples. Here the central image of Sakyamuni represents the basic Buddha-principle... Bhaisajyaguru to the east (the direction of his paradise) watches over all living beings, protecting them, strengthening their health, and preventing them from suffering untimely death; Amitabha to the west is the compassionate lord who cares for those in the spirit world after death, who watches over them in his Western Realm of Bliss (Birnbaum, p. 252-253).
In Mahayana Buddhism, the Medicine Buddha watches over sentient beings in their current lifetimes, granting them peace, happiness and freedom from disease and other calamities. Amitabha Buddha watches over sentient beings after their death, ensuring them a favorable rebirth in his land. The combination of current and future peace and happiness leads eventually to ultimate peace, happiness and liberation, that is, Buddhahood (Master Thich Thien Hue).

3. The full name of the Medicine Buddha (Bhaisajya-guru) is rendered in this text as Medicine Buddha Lapis Lazuli Radiance Tathagata. Please note other variants occurring in the literature:

Healing Buddha
Master of Healing
Master of Medicine

Azure Radiance Tathagata
Vaidurya Light Tathagata
Beryl Radiance Tathagata.

Moreover, many popular books use the Japanese name Yakushi.

According to V. de Visser (Ancient Buddhism, vol. II), most of the Bodhisattvas in the Medicine Buddha’s Assembly are also depicted surrounding Amitabha Buddha, in paintings of Amitabha’s descent to welcome the faithful (Raigo). This is another example of the close relationship between the Medicine Buddha and Amitabha Buddha in the Mahayana tradition.

4. The mudra is not fixed. In the Tibetan tradition, for example, instead of the Varuda (compassion) mudra, the Medicine Buddha is sometimes depicted forming the “taking the earth as witness” mudra. Moreover, rather than forming a mudra, the right hand may hold the healing fruit (myrobalan) as well as its stem and leaves. Furthermore, the entire body of the Medicine Buddha is painted blue. (Details graciously provided by Upasaka Harry Leong.)

5. Please note, however, that in the Vajradhatu Mandala of the Esoteric School, the Medicine Buddha is apparently associated with Aksobhya Buddha (Louis Frederic).

6. The Medicine Buddha provides support to Pure Land cultivators who may need freedom from mundane concerns (disease, material need, calamity, untimely death, etc.) in order to concentrate singlemindedly on their goal of rebirth in Sukhavati. This may explain the representation, on the major altar of many Mahayana temples, of a massive trinity of Sakyamuni Buddha, the Medicine Buddha and Amitabha Buddha. One notable example of this trinity is in the Mahayana Temple complex in South Cairo, NY (USA).

"94 Sutra of the Medicine Buddha"

Exponents of Tibetan tantric practice and of the Chinese/Japanese forms of Pure Land practice will recognize close affinities between what they have learned and what is advocated in these Healing Buddha sutras. Those familiar with works about Kuan Yin (Avalokitesvara, Chenresigs) will find that the powers attributed to the Healing Buddhas, and the reasons for those powers, are very similar in character to those attributed to that Bodhisattva ... It can be confidently asserted that similar methods and values pertaining to the Healing Buddhas are accepted by the vast majority of Mahayana Buddhists, no matter to which school they belong (John Blofeld).

In Mahayana Buddhism, there are many popular Buddhas and Bodhisattvas. The reason why some persons seek the help, for example, of the Bodhisattva Kuan Yin while others call upon the Medicine Buddha, is related to their past affinities (causes and conditions) with a particular Buddha or Bodhisattva. The important point to remember is that the Medicine Buddha specializes in curing diseases – particularly "incurable" ones!

The Medicine Buddha and Amitabha Buddha each has his own Pure Land, the Lapis Lazuli Pure Land and Sukhavati, respectively. Both are ideal, transcendental realms where practitioners can further their cultivation and ultimately attain Buddhahood. The main difference between the two Pure Lands (indeed between Sukhavati and any other Pure Land) lies in its accessibility. It is the difference between a country which receives immigrants and one which actively goes out to recruit them. The Medicine Buddha’s special mission is to prevent calamities and cure illnesses, while the principal vow of Amitabha Buddha is to make his Pure Land a place of refuge for all sentient beings. See also Note 2.

7. Names of Buddhas and Bodhisattvas:

The name of a Buddha or a Bodhisattva is presumed to embody his virtues and powers. Hence, invocation of the name of a Buddha or a Bodhisattva activates those virtues and powers (Luis O. Gomez, The Land of Bliss, p. 311).

This emphasis on names is frequently stressed in the Mahayana teachings about Bodhisattvas and Buddhas; in these teachings, the names of great beings are held to be precious. By hearing the name of the great being, one can gain contact with his spiritual force and protection (Birnbaum, p. 40).

8. The original wording in the sutra is “no women”. We have translated it, following Prof. Raoul Birnbaum, as “no temptations”. In the Buddha’s time, some 2500 years ago, the clergy was overwhelmingly male, and therefore the source of temptation to abandon celibacy was viewed as largely female. The context of the sutra also suggests “temptations” as the better rendering.

9. Please note that the word used here is “birth”, not “rebirth” as in the Amitabha Sutra. See also note 6, last paragraph.

10. To succeed in cultivation, it is essential to develop the Bodhi Mind (i.e., to seek Buddhahood for the benefit of sentient beings). To do so, the advanced practitioner must set aside the ego, sever attachment to the self, and thus be willing to sacrifice himself for sentient beings (donate his eyes, ears, etc.). This important point, illustrated time and time again in the Jatakas (accounts of the previous lives of the Buddha), is explained in detail in the Brahma Net Sutra, Secondary Precept no. 16. This sutra is available free of charge from the International Buddhist Monastic Institute (tel. 818-893-5317), the Sutra Translation Committee of the US and Canada (tel. 718-584-0621), the Buddha Educational Foundation in Taiwan (tel. 886-2-23951198, email/overseas@budaedu.org.tw).

One of the foremost exponents of Ch’an in modern China, Hsu Yun, burned off his finger in sacrifice for the sake of his deceased mother in his fifty-eight year. This is discussed in his autobiography translated by Charles Luk, Empty Cloud: The Autobiography of the Chinese Zen Master Hsu Yun (Rochester, New York 1974), pp.27-28 (Birnbaum, p. 49).

11. According to the sutra, the efficacity of the Medicine Buddha’s name is absolute. All karma, even Fixed Karma, or the heavy karma created by the Five Cardinal Sins, is erased through concentration on the Medicine Buddha.

12. The notion that a ghost or demon can be invoked through an evil mantra is by no means limited to Asia:

In the soil beneath a mango tree, Eliezer, one of Zohar’s sons and the author’s father, draws the outline of a human figure and tries to conjure a golem out of the ground. In Jewish mysticism, a golem is a supernatural creature created from dirt and with magical words ... Like the Frankenstein monster, golems are supposed to be benign and protective, but as they are made by man, not God, they are imperfect and frequently run amok (NYT Book Review, 10/22/2000).

13. Rebirth as a male:

The sudden transformation of a woman into a male means nothing but the transcendence of the differences between male and female. Sakyamuni Buddha asserted that animals, birds, worms, plants and trees, as well as human beings, possess the Buddha- nature. How could he then discriminate between men and women? It is impossible. Observed with the Buddha’s eyes, all living beings are equal. We must never misunderstand this (Niwano, Buddhism for Today).

Notes 97 **
14. Please note that while the quotation begins with “Namo bhagawate” (“homage to the Medicine Buddha”), the Dharani (Mantra) itself is the phrase beginning with the word “Om” and ending with “svaha”.

15. An explanation for this cosmic change is offered below:

When the Buddha taught, our world became a celestial abode. The power of his articulated wisdom made it possible for those present to see beyond mundane reality, into the inherent purity and cosmic presence that eternally surround us. The mandala that appeared around him is a vision of humanity’s potential: enlightened mind in harmony with nature, working for the benefit of all. It is the archtypal pristine world inhabited by beings living in a golden age of spiritual achievement: heaven on earth. It is our world, after the gloom of ignorance and confusion of mental defilements have been removed by the lights of purifying awareness, and the glorious prosperity of nature renewed by treating the earth as a sacred garden of medicine (D. Crow, In Search of the Medicine Buddha).

16. There are minor differences in the way the precepts are formulated in the various Mahayana schools, which accounts for some discrepancies in their number. The principles underlying the precepts are, however, the same. Nowadays, the Bodhisattva precepts are usually reckoned as ten major and 48 minor precepts, while the Bhiksu precepts are listed as 348.

17. In Asian popular belief, each person is born with two innate spirits, who record all his deeds – good and bad. In Buddhism, these spirits stand for the Alaya consciousness (see Glossary), which follows a person from lifetime to lifetime.

18. On the significance of the number seven in Buddhism:

"98 Sutra of the Medicine Buddha"
According to the Esoteric School, the number seven is the ultimate number in the cycle of Birth and Death. Therefore, in the bardo stage, [between reincarnations] the “soul” must undergo changes every seven days, and to be efficacious, mantras should be recited at least seven times ... Starting with the number seven and multiplying it by three or seven, we have twenty-one or forty-nine. Therefore, the Esoteric School teaches that mantras should be recited [at least] seven times to be effective, twenty-one or forty-nine times if the mind is weak and agitated (Thich Thien Tam, Buddhism of Wisdom and Faith, p. 174).

19. How is it possible for a dying person to recover immediately, upon reciting the Medicine Buddha’s name? It should be remembered that in Buddhism, everything is Mind-made, Mind-Only, including birth and death. Thus, in Zen literature, for example, truly accomplished Zen masters are always described as above birth and death, “returning to quiescence” at a time and place of their own choosing. Here, as everywhere else in this sutra, the key element is faith: the stronger one’s faith, the deeper one’s level of samadhi. One’s power over the environment likewise increases, even to the point of turning death into life, not to mention curing disease!

The practice of lighting lamps and hanging banners is a skillful means designed to heighten the faith of the devout.

20. Please note the crucial combination of self-help (good roots and practice on the part of the cultivator) and other-power (the assistance of the Buddhas and Bodhisattvas).

21. In Mahayana sutras, the word “parents” refers to all sentient beings, as throughout the eons of time in Samsara, all beings have been our fathers or mothers at one time or another. Thus, to be unfilial is to transgress against any sentient being (Brahma Net Sutra, Secondary Precept 20).
22. This passage shows that all karma, even the heaviest, can be dissipated through concentrating on the Medicine Buddha and cultivating merits and virtues. Thus, there is no disease or calamity that cannot be alleviated.

23. The vows of the Yaksa Generals to come to the assistance of all sentient beings derive from the virtues and power of the Medicine Buddha. They constitute another important means of curing disease and preventing calamities.

Please note that the number of Yaksa generals (12) multiplied by the size of their retinues (7,000 members each) equals 84,000 – the total number of Dharma methods employed by the Buddha to teach and convert sentient beings.

24. Lit., “strand of five colors”. The ritual of “Knotting” the names of the Yaksa Generals consists of singlemindedly reciting the Medicine Buddha Dharani (Mantra) one or three times, followed by the name of a Yaksa general, while simultaneously tying one knot. This continues until all twelve names are recited and twelve knots are tied. Please note that this practice is a skillful expedient designed to deepen the faith of the devout.

See Master Hsuan Hua (Medicine Master Sutra, p. 173):

A five-colored thread symbolizes the Five Directions (i.e., all directions), each of which has a demon associated with it. When the five-colored thread is tied into knots, it brings stability to insecure places.

"100 Sutra of the Medicine Buddha"
Glossary

Alaya Consciousness. "All karma created in the present and previous lifetimes is stored in the Alaya Consciousness. This is regarded as that which undergoes the cycle of birth and death" (Sokk: 9).

"The concept of Alaya Vijnana (consciousness) constitutes the basis of the 'mind-only' doctrine of the Yogachara [school] and stands at the center of this school's theory of individualization, according to which past karmic seeds ... enter into the Alaya-Vijnana, whence they arise again to occasion thought activity. This individuated thinking is ridden with ignorance and egotism, which instigate the notion that it constitutes a real person in the real world" (Sham: 4).

Amitabha Buddha. Amitabha is the most commonly used name for the Buddha of Infinite Light and Infinite Life. A transhistorical Buddha venerated by all Mahayana schools (T'ien-T'ai, Esoteric, Zen ...) and, particularly, Pure Land. Presides over the Western Pure Land (Land of Ultimate Bliss) or Sukhavati, where anyone can be reborn through utterly sincere (i.e., singleminded) recitation of/meditation on his name.

"In the Pure Land schools of China and Japan, Amitabha is the intermediary between Supreme Reality and mankind, and faith in him ensures rebirth in his Paradise (Sukhavati). Symbolically, Amitabha is Higher Self (or Self-Nature)" (Humphrey: 30).

Amitabha Buddha at the higher or noumenon level represents the True Mind, the Self-Nature common to the Buddhas and sentient beings---infinitely bright and everlasting. This deeper understanding provides the rationale for the harmonization of Zen and Pure Land, two of the most popular schools of Mahayana Buddhism.

Ananda. "A cousin of the Buddha, the brother of Devadatta. One of the ten great disciples of the Buddha. Ananda accompanied the Buddha for more than twenty years and was the Master's favorite disciple. He attained Enlightenment after the demise of the Buddha under the guidance of Mahakasyapa. He was famed for his excellent memory and recited the Sutra-Pitaka (the sermons contained in the Tripitaka) at the First Buddhist Council" (Daito: 8).

Dharma. The word Dharma has several meanings: a) The teachings of the Buddhas (generally capitalized in English); b) law, doctrine; c) things, events, phenomena.

Dharma Semblance Age. The time following Buddha Sakyamuni's demise has been divided into three periods: i) the Perfect Age of the Dharma, lasting 500 years, when the Buddha's teaching was correctly practiced and Enlightenment often attained; ii) the Dharma Semblance Age, lasting about 1,000 years, when a form of the teaching was practiced but Enlightenment seldom attained; iii) the Dharma-Ending Age, lasting some 'ten thousand' years, when a diluted form of the teaching exists and Enlightenment is rarely attained.

Eight Precepts. "The eight precepts which a lay Buddhist should observe on certain retreats: (1) not killing living beings, (2) not stealing, (3) not having sexual intercourse, (4) not telling lies, (5) not drinking intoxicants, (6) not wearing bodily decoration, not using perfumes, not singing and dancing, and not going to see dances or plays, (7) not sleeping in a raised bed, and (8) not eating after noon" (Inagaki: 396-397).

Eight Types of Divinities. "These are various classes of non-human beings that are regarded as protectors of the Buddhist Dharma and often appear as part of the audience attending the Buddha's sermons. Strictly speaking, not all are celestials, but most of them inhabit the celestial or heavenly spheres of a world system. The eight classes, are: (1) gods (deva); (2) asuras; (3) the gandharvas and (4) the kinnaras; local spirits known as (5) yakshas (yaksa), sometimes associated with the Tushita Heaven, but usually located on the human plane; two kinds of mythical serpents, (6) the mahoragas and (7) the nagas; and (8) the celestial eagles known as the garudas." (Gomez: 289-290).

Eighty Auspicious Characteristics. "Bodily attributes of a Buddha, more subtle than the thirty-two auspicious signs. Examples: youthful complexion; a soft body; lips colored like a red, bright gourd; face like a full, clear moon; emitting fragrance from the pores and mouth; deportment as awesome as that of a lion; graceful and steady gait." (Chan: 495-496). See also “Thirty-two Marks of Greatness”.

Evil Paths. see Three Evil Realms

Great Vehicle. see Mahayana

Karma. Action leading to future retribution or reward, in current or future lifetimes.
(I) Collective karma: the difference between personal and collective karma can be seen in the following example: Suppose a country goes to war to gain certain economic advantages and in the process, numerous soldiers and civilians are killed or maimed. If a particular citizen volunteers for military service and actually participates in the carnage, he commits a personal karma of killing. Other citizens, however, even if opposed to the war, may benefit directly or indirectly (e.g., through economic gain). They are thus said to share in the collective karma of killing by their country.

(II) Fixed karma: in principle, all karma is subject to change. Fixed karma, however, is karma which can be changed only in extraordinary circumstances, because it derives from an evil act committed simultaneously with mind, speech, and body. An example of fixed karma would be a premeditated crime (versus a crime of passion).

Lapis Lazuli. "Lapis lazuli is a deep blue gem-stone marked by sparkling golden crystals of iron pyrite, like the night sky awash with bright stars" (Birnbaum: 251).

Mahayana. "The Great Vehicle; one of the two major schools of Buddhism, the other being Theravada. Mahayana aims at bringing all sentient beings to Buddhahood. [Advanced] followers of Mahayana are called 'Bodhisattvas.' At the outset of their career, they make vows to save all beings, and in order to realize them, cultivate wisdom and accumulate merits. When their vows are fulfilled, they become Buddhas. Although historical evidence shows that Mahayana arose a few centuries after the Buddha's death...the essential part of the Mahayana teaching was revealed by the Buddha [during his lifetime to advanced practitioners]" (Inagaki: 407).

" 104 Sutra of the Medicine Buddha
"Mahayana radically changed the conception of the adept: he no longer aspires to Nirvana but to the condition of a Buddha...two things are necessary for the Bodhisattva and his practice of wisdom: ‘Never to abandon all beings, and to see into the truth that all things are empty’" (Eliade: 219).

Manjusri. "Manjusri, a famous Bodhisattva, is worshipped as the [personification of transcendental] Wisdom, and popularly depicted riding on a lion, the symbol of bravery. He generally holds a sword in his right hand, while in his left he has a lotus, on which a book [or sutra] is laid. His image is often seen in the second hall of the Buddhist monastery by the side of that of Sakyamuni Buddha" (Will: enc/264).

Medicine Buddha. "Buddha who heals the ills of body and spirit including that of ignorance; popular figure in early Mahayana Buddhism; reigns over the Pure Lapis Lazuli Paradise in the East" (Okazaki: 187).

Pratyeka-Buddha. "These Buddhas become fully enlightened ... by meditating on the principle of causality. Unlike the Perfect Buddhas, however, they do not exert themselves to teach others” (A. Buzo and T. Prince).

"In Buddhism, Pratyeka-buddhas generally mean those who live in a time when there is no Buddha but who awaken to the Truth through their own efforts" (Sokk: 344).

Precepts. “Rules of conduct and discipline established by the Buddha” (Yoko: 210). In addition to the Precepts, there are a number of regulations established either by the Buddha or, later on, by heads of Buddhist orders or major monasteries. The regulations are designed to clarify the rules or Precepts or their mode of application.

Sakyamuni Buddha. "Historical founder of Buddhism, Gautama Siddhartha, the Buddha Sakyamuni, who [lived] circa 581-501 B.C. as the first son of King Suddhodana, whose capital city of Kapilavastu was located in what is now Nepal. At the age of twenty-nine, he left his father’s palace and his wife and child in search of the meaning of existence. One morning at the age of thirty-five, he realized Enlightenment while practicing meditation seated beneath the Bodhi tree. Thereafter, He spent the next forty-five years, until his death at the age of eighty, expounding his teachings ... in order that all sentient beings might realize the same Enlightenment that he had. Nowadays, the term 'a Buddha' denotes anyone who has realized Enlightenment, while ‘the Buddha' refers to the historical Buddha, Sakyamuni. 'Buddhas,' naturally refers to all enlightened beings" (Yoko: 181).

Seven Treasures. Traditionally listed as: gold, silver, lapis lazuli, crystal, agate, red pearl and carnelian. They represent the seven powers of faith, perseverance, sense of shame, avoidance of wrongdoing, mindfulness, concentration and wisdom.

Sravaka. Literally, "hearer". Also translated as disciple. "Those who follow [the early teachings of the Buddha] and eventually become Arhats as a result of listening to the Buddhas and following their teachings" (T. Prince: 81).

"In Mahayana Buddhism [the term Sravaka] refers to a person in the Theravada school who exerts himself to attain the stage of

106 Sutra of the Medicine Buddha
Arhat by observing 250 precepts in the case of monks and 348 in the case of nuns. This is a lower stage than that of Bodhisattva (Yoko: 289).

"Originally a term for any practicing disciple of the Buddha (especially those who had adopted monastic vows), the word eventually came to refer in Mahayana literature to those who were 'mere disciples,' that is, those who did not seek to emulate the Buddha by taking the Bodhisattva's vows. In this sense, the word is often used in contrast to Bodhisattva ..." (Gomez).

Sumaru. Also called Polar Mountain. "A mountain thought to stand at the center of the world, according to ancient Indian tradition... The god Indra resides on the summit, while the Four Heavenly Kings live halfway down the four sides" (Sokk: 412).

In Buddhist cosmology, the universe is composed of worlds upon worlds, ad infinitum. (Our earth is only an infinitesimal part of one of these countless worlds.) The Polar Mountain (Mount Sumaru) is the central mountain of each world.

Ten Grounds (Stages, Bhumi). "Ten Stages (or Ten Bhumi) through which the practitioner advances in Buddhist practice. In the system of the fifty-two (or fifty-three) levels of Bodhisattva practice, they are viewed as the forty-first through fiftieth levels" (Sokk: 439). In other words, the Ten Stages are among the highest levels achieved by Bodhisattvas before attaining Buddhahood.

Thirty-two Marks of Greatness (32 Auspicious Signs). "The major signs adorning the visible body of a Buddha or that of a universal monarch. Some examples are: a protuberance on the crown; a curling, white hair between the eyebrows; a golden complexion; a long, broad tongue; a halo ten feet in radius; an excellent voice" (Chan: 495). See also "Eighty Auspicious Characteristics".

Three Evil Realms (Paths). "The three lower states of Samsara: hell-dweller, hungry ghost, and animal. To be born in a miserable state is the result of evil karma committed in a past life. When the retribution for that karma is completed, one will again be born in a higher state" (Chan: 479).

These paths can be taken as states of mind; i.e., when someone has a vicious thought of maiming or killing another, he is effectively reborn, for that moment, in the hells.

"Animals and hungry ghosts, heavens and hells (or paradises and purgatories) are metaphors for spiritual conditions and spiritual progress. They embody the states of mind whose pain and confusion motivate us to seek salvation, and the happiness and ease that foreshadow salvation" (Gomez/Land of Bliss: 30).

"According to Buddhist teachings, karmic results follow ineluctably upon the perpetration of acts, irrespective of conscious attitude or moral conscience (although the quality and force of the act may be significantly affected thereby). Thus beings in the lower states, animals for example, do indeed accumulate karma and must sooner or later experience the consequences of their actions, even though these may be performed under the irresistible influence of instinct. And the Karmic situation is compounded, rather than mitigated, by an unconsciousness of the Dharma. The strength of instinctual habit and the ignorance of what behavior is to be adopted and what behavior is to be abandoned constitutes one of the principal miseries of existence in states other than that of the precious human condition" (Shantideva: 108).

"108 Sutra of the Medicine Buddha
Three Root Precepts (Three Bodies of Pure Precepts). Three groups of precepts which form the basis of all Bodhisattva practice: (1) Do not what is evil, (2) Do what is good and (3) Be of benefit to all sentient beings.

The Mahayana Three Root Precepts are similar to a formulation in the Pali Canon, except for the last clause which reads in the latter, "Keep the mind pure." The difference highlights the altruistic emphasis of Mahayana Buddhism.

All sets of precepts, including the Bodhisattva precepts, are derived from the Three Bodies of Pure Precepts, the root precepts in Buddhism. These precepts may in principle be administered to Buddhists in lieu of the full set of Bodhisattva precepts described in the Brahma Net Sutra.

Triple Jewel. "In Buddhism, there are three fundamental aspects -- known as the Three Jewels (triratna) because of their preciousness -- which form a basis for belief and practice. The first Jewel is the Buddha, who, after years of searching found the path to Enlightenment and subsequently taught it to others. The second is the Dharma, the teaching or the truth about the way things are. The last one is the Sangha, the community of monks, nuns, and laypeople who practice and help others to practice the teaching..." (Clarke: 151).

Wheel-turning King. "In the Indian mythological history of the world, a universal monarch occasionally appears who is supposed to be a most powerful and meritorious king capable of ruling the entire world" (Chan: 485).

Yakushi (the Medicine Buddha) is the Bodhisattva-doctor. He holds a medicine jar in his hand and is attended by twelve gods each of whom represents one of his twelve vows. The main object of his appearance among us is to cure us of ignorance, which is the most fundamental of all the ills the flesh is heir to.

The land and people would be enveloped in peace.
Wind and rain would appear accordingly,
and there will be no disasters.
Nations would be prosperous and there would be no use for soldiers or weapons.
People would abide by morality and accord with laws.
They would be courteous and humble,
and everyone would be content without injustices.
There would be no thefts or violence.
The strong would not dominate the weak and everyone would get their fair share.”
With bad advisors forever left behind,
From paths of evil he departs for eternity,
Soon to see the Buddha of Limitless Light
And perfect Samantabhadra’s Supreme Vows.

DEDICATION OF MERIT

May the merit and virtue accrued from this work adorn Amitabha Buddha’s Pure Land, repay the four great kindnesses above, and relieve the suffering of those on the three paths below.
May those who see or hear of these efforts generate Bodhi-mind, spend their lives devoted to the Buddha Dharma, and finally be reborn together in the Land of Ultimate Bliss.
Homage to Amita Buddha!
